Parking Ticket

No Help, Please

Why is it that with all the improvement in safety razors the makers of double-edge blades can't make both sides equally sharp? At first a man blamed his whiskers, whose toughness varies from day to day. Then he blamed the war. Now he knows the truth — Americans don't give as much attention to precision manufacture as the Swedes and the Swiss.

Magnolia has parking meters and makes a virtue of the fact.

LaGrone Williams overparked in the Columbia county-seat town and came by The Star yesterday to tell me about it. He said when he got back to his car he found a ticket. It's here on my desk. It says:

"Out-of-Town Visitors

"Welcome to Magnolia."

"You failed to recognize our parking meter. Please drop a coin in the meter and come back to see us."

"Visit Magnolia often."

"This ticket courtesy of the Magnolia Police Department."

"Chief of Police."

Suggested theme song for Magnolia: Dear Hearts and Gentle People.

Pursuing my ever-recurring editorial theme that the Truman administration is running this country solely for the benefit of the downtrodden masses who jam the big cities — they moved off the farm to get there — I submit the following headline from yesterday's edition:

"Democrats Open Drive for Rent Control."

The AP dispatch under that headline reported that Chester Bowles, one of the government's dictators in wartime, now a governor of Connecticut, filed a statement with the Senate Banking committee decrying that "dropping rent controls would cost the nation's tenants one and a half billion dollars a year."

Quite the contrary, however, abolishing federal rent control would be an important step in getting rid of all those government bureaus which sprang up during the war and now refuse to do although this is the fifth year since the shooting ended.

And the cost to the taxpayers is many times the imaginary billion and a half dollars a year which Mr. Bowles says the abolishing of rent control would cost tenants.

All any citizen needs to do is to take a long look at the withholding tax deducted from his salary check and figure how it stacks up against his 1950 rent bill.

It's positively amazing the way the rent-control bureaucrats hang on to their plush jobs when the public is doing its level best to persuade the Washington gang to go out and look for real work.

Protestants Fight Back in West Germany

Berlin, April 25 — (P) — Protestantism in Soviet-occupied East Germany is fighting with its back to the wall.

Church sources accuse Communist leaders of:

Forcing Protestant clergymen to join the "national front" Communist mass organization at the price of their moral integrity.

Using the schools and the "free German youth" (FJ) organization to turn the younger generation against religion.

More than 14,000,000 of the 18,000,000 Germans in the Soviet zone be baptized members of the Evangelical (Protestant) faith.

With so much at stake, Eastern protestantism has sought repeatedly to avoid an open break with the Communist-controlled government. But the Communists have appeared to interpret this as a weakness.

They have stepped up their campaign first to capture the church's influence and eventually to bury the church altogether.

The struggle may be racing to an early showdown.

Last Sunday in more than 4,000 churches of East Germany Evangelical pastors read a common denunciation of Communist pressure.

Communist Prime Minister Otto Grotewohl called this an "attack on the constitution, the government and the republic."

Under the loosely-written Communist constitution of East Germany, each pastor laid himself open to possible imprisonment or even death by his act. None has been reported arrested yet. But the threat hangs over all pending a conference Friday between Grotewohl and Bishop Otto Dibelius of Berlin-Brandenburg.

Potatoes did not "catch on" readily in Europe until famine proved their food value.

City Cleanup Campaign to Start May 1

The clean up campaign in Hope will begin Monday of next week. The schedule for free hauling of trash is as follows:

Ward One — Monday and Tuesday; Ward Two — Wednesday and Thursday; Ward Three — Friday; Ward Four — Saturday.

All housewives are requested to cooperate by placing their trash in the front yard or on the curb on the first day applicable to their ward.

The week beginning May 1 has been designated as clean up week and many other health and fire prevention projects will be carried on during this period. All alleys and public gathering places will be sprayed by the City fog spraying machine. Also, the City will start the project of house spraying beginning on the same date. Orders should be placed by calling Charles Reversen at 324.

No Red Red Threatens U.S. Says Tuman

Washington, April 25 — (P) — President Truman's assertion that Communists abroad aren't a great threat to this country offered general reassurance but Republican critics did seem to be impressed.

In a speech present and former governing lawyers, broadcast to the nation, Mr. Truman said last night:

"There is none of American life in which Communist party is making headway — except in the deluded minds of some people."

Senators W. H. Nebraskans, the GOP lead; Brewster (R-Me.), Ferguson (R-H) and Mundt (R-S.D.), went with their demands for a widened investigation of state government workers and former eyes, whereas Mr. Truman stated a single person who had adjudged to be a Communist otherwise is loyal remains on government payroll today."

Senator McCarty (R-Wis.) commented that "apparent indifference to the test threat ever faced by this is impossible to understand." McCarty has been charging the state department is even for Communists.

The President of the Federal Bar Association made his speech:

"We know greatest threat to us does not come from Communists in this country, where they are a noisy bunch and universally despised. The greatest threat comes from communism abroad, where center of its military and economic strength lies."

"The real threat is that communism might run other countries and strengthen itself for an ultimate on us."

Although Nebraskans spoke of the governmentality program as "an outlasts a ccess," a senate foreign sub committee precheck the operations of the department's security division; Green (D-R) and Lodge (Mass.) are expected to travel Europe later to complete the year abroad.

Due to Attention Attracted Speech in Defense of Negro Rapist Is Printed in Full

(Editor's note: Because it has aroused so much attention in this area, and because we believe it is an important commentary on one of the South's vital problems, we are reprinting here in full a speech delivered by Negro Attorney Harold Flowers of Pine Bluff, Ark., in defense of Herman Maxwell, charged with rape, in the Hempstead circuit court at Pine Bluff, Ark., April 19, 1950.)

I trust that here today we have worked together and lived together that you can by your verdict, evidenced by mercy and as Christians men, tell the world that there is in our land and in our time those things which the able prosecutor mentioned, that all Americans stand for. I know that we must be tolerant. I know that we must be kind. I know that we must have mercy.

The unfortunate facts which come to us by the testimony given by the witnesses in this case, stands and remains undisputed by this defendant. There is no contradiction whatever. The state of Arkansas has performed its duty in so far as the prosecution is concerned, and in so far as the judge of this court is concerned: I am speaking probably for the last time in behalf of Herman Maxwell, and as I speak there hovers about me something about the realities of life, and the experiences of one with another.

There hovers about me the great reality of learning to love one another and learning to show mercy. Gentlemen, it is only for that purpose that I stand here today — the hope that from this community of Hope, there shall come a story — a story of mercy — to all the world, and become the greatest story ever told. To the family of the prosecuting witness in this case, let me say that there is nothing I can express to you that will assuage the pain and soothe the unforgetful experience to which you have been subjected. There is nothing any of us can do except be kind, loving and merciful.

I cannot suggest any other course for any member of the aggrieved in this family, other than to look to that one God, the creator of mankind, and ask his guidance, and seek his aid to help clean out the hearts and minds of men in order that such things will not again happen on this earth. We must seek His aid while we are passing through this period of crucifixion.

We have just come out of the Easter season and our minds have been clarified. We have tried to live and understand the death of Jesus on the cross between two thieves. We have heard the story of the Master's "forgive them, for they know not what they do." We have taught and we shall continue this defendant ought to be death.

We are here today, gentlemen of the jury, not to consider the guilt or innocence of the defendant in this case, but we are here for the purpose of considering whether or not the punishment of

ROSE FESTIVAL PRINCESS TO TOUR THIS AREA

Woman Slashed by Youth, Still in Serious Condition

Mountain Home, April 25 — (P) — A teen-age mother remained in critical condition today from hatchet wounds inflicted by a 16-year-old orphan boy.

State Police Sgt. W. T. Bowling said Albert Clay Roberts had signed a statement admitting the attack on Mrs. Ralph Conley, 19, at her home in Cotter, 10 miles southwest of here Saturday night.

Mrs. Conley suffered about a dozen deep wounds slashed on her head and body. Her one-year-old daughter, Sharyn, suffered a head cut but is not believed serious.

The attack occurred at the Conley apartment, next door to the one where Roberts lived with an uncle. Mrs. Conley's husband had left for work on the night shift at Bull Shoals dam only a few minutes earlier.

Bowling said Roberts declared in his statement that robbery was his motive.

No charges have been placed against the youth, pending outcome of Mrs. Conley's injuries. She is in a hospital at Gassville.

Red Guerrillas Join Fight in Hainan

Taipei, Formosa, April 25 — (P) — Red guerrillas, penned for months in the rugged five finger mountains of Hainan Island, swarmed today within four miles of Yulin, Nationalist escape gate on the southern coast.

The second conviction came Wednesday, April 19, after a two-day trial. Formal sentence was pronounced, in accordance with a jury's verdict, by Judge Bush this morning.

Maxwell was first convicted of rape and sentenced to die in August 1949. That conviction was reversed by the Arkansas Supreme Court and a new trial ordered.

The second conviction came Wednesday, April 19, after a two-day trial. Formal sentence was pronounced, in accordance with a jury's verdict, by Judge Bush this morning.

Maxwell had evacuated emergency army and navy headquarters at Yulin.

The guerrillas were spurred by the collapse of Chinese Nationalist troops in the face of numerically inferior Communist forces who stormed ashore nine days ago.

The Nationalists, possibly 125,000 strong, cracked under the pressure of some 15,000 veteran Communists and the threat of 60,000 guerrillas at their rear.

They fled on Saturday from Hohow, the capital where only the day before they had staged a victory celebration. The Communists entered peacefully Sunday morning.

A general on Hainan said Chiang Kai-shek and ordered the island abandoned. This was denied here, but there were reliable indications the report was true.

The Red guerrilla drive on Yulin was marked by fires, possibly from burning villages. A plane pilot, one of the last to leave, reported the flares.

There were accounts of isolated clashes between Red irregulars and Nationalist troops.

Attending the meeting yesterday were Mr. Sparks, Cheek Armbrust, Lorraine Blackwood, Cecil Guthrie, Crit Stuart, Jr., Byron Hudleston and Jess Davis.

Balanced Farm Group Talks Over Contest

All persons interested in the balanced farming contest can get record books and cards from Mr. Sparks at the courthouse. Every farmer is invited to enter competition for prizes.

Attending the meeting yesterday were Mr. Sparks, Cheek Armbrust, Lorraine Blackwood, Cecil Guthrie, Crit Stuart, Jr., Byron Hudleston and Jess Davis.

Remodeling of C of C Office Starts

Frankfurt, Germany, April 25 — (P) — West German politicians are talking tough again to the Western Allies. They are threatening to fold up their government — to resign and turn the running of the West German republic back to the Allies.

Why these sudden anti-American outbursts, these rumors of Allied-German crises, in the American, British and French zones?

In a month or two voters in several of the Western states will elect state legislatures. You get votes in Germany if you stand up against the Allies. It was the same anti-American story last summer before West Germany elected its first parliament. Every politician blasted the occupation powers then.

Leading the anti-American statements now, and leading the defiant singing of "Deutschland ueber Alles," is Chancellor Konrad Adenauer himself.

His main anti-American complaint is a good vote-catcher — the income tax. The allied high commission vetoed provisionally German law that would reduce the levies.

The West did so because savings for the German taxpayers would mean more taxes for the Americans, British and Frenchmen. The extra cash would come out of their pockets. Over the weekend Adenauer dropped hints that he might resign because the Allies had vetoed the tax reduction and another German-passed law.

The chancellor's attitude is causing resentment among Western officials in Germany. They feel he is putting personal politics above the security of Germany and Western Europe.

New York, April 25 — (P) — Peace efforts to halt the nationwide telephone strike set for tomorrow morning went into their final hours today.

Neither side held out the last hope for settlement.

Already 10,000 equipment installers are striking against the Bell system and are under union orders to jam long distance lines wherever possible.

Only an unexpected, last-minute break — possibly arbitration or calling a presidential fact-finding board — remained as a chance to head off 230,000 workers in twice-postponed general telephone strike.

President Truman's second strike truce extended, talks revived

Washington, April 25 — (P) — The government pushed for rail labor peace terms today after averting a serious strike due Wednesday on several key railroads.

Francis A. O'Neill, Jr., chairman of the national mediation board, said negotiations will be started soon in Chicago in an effort to solve a union demand for an extra fireman on big diesel locomotives.

Union Printers on Strike in Texarkana

Texarkana, April 22.—(UPI)—Members of Local 313 of the International Typographical Union went into continuous session here last night and the Texarkana Gazette was not published this morning.

The management of Texarkana newspapers incorporated said it turned to an afternoon edition of the Texarkana News with the newsroom composing room being manned largely by employees of other departments of the Texarkana newspapers.

Paul L. Morrison, vice president of Local 313, a member of the union, was still in continuous session.

Both management and the union said the issue was the new unionization of four women teletypesetter operators. Teletypesetter operators copy news stories on machines which transform the stories into tape. The tape is later run through special linotype machines which set the stories in type.

Publisher C. E. Palmer of the Texarkana newspapers was in New York attending meetings of Associated Press member newspaper publishers and the American

Gendarmes Were Imposters French Insist

Paris, April 22.—(UPI)—The three "gendarmes" who rapped Bing Crosby sharply on the soles of his shoes and told him he couldn't sleep on the grass must have been imposters, a Paris police commissioner insisted today.

No polite Paris gendarme would think of doing such a thing, the commissioner said when he heard Crosby's tale of a meeting with three gendarmes in a grass park along the Champs Elysees Saturday.

Crosby said they left him go when he convinced them, with a gold medal, that he was an American policeman on vacation. Crosby, the singer, he said, meant nothing to them.

bright the stars were," she said.

"Think of the thousands and thousands of years they have had to grow bright in," he told her. "While they watched the desert caravans taking the golden road to Samarkand! Do you know Piers?"

In that moment she only knew the music of his exceptionally attractive speaking voice, sending a soft, warm glow through her.

"Oh, yes, I know him well," she said. "What a heavenly poet."

"And he died young, as poets are apt to do," said Piers, shrugging his shoulders. "This is no world for them. They—by the kindness of Providence—stay out of it altogether in these days."

THERE was a bitter edge to his voice which hurt her. "Well, let's be thankful so many have called on us," she said gently. "Keats and Shelley, and Fletcher and Rupert Brooke. Then Swinburne and Browning lived to be old."

He had been leaning on his hand, and he straightened, giving her half-humorous look of inquiry. "Is it possible that the modern young woman reads the poets?"

"If you mean I'm a 'modern young woman,' I do."

Piers stared down at the glowing end of his cigar, and Clemency watched him, a little pulse throb in her throat, struggling with her shyness.

Then: "I hope you didn't think I was very rude, Colonel Amberley," she blurted out. "I mean—when I refused to come down to dinner."

"Rude? No, of course not." He paused, looking straight into her face; she forced herself to meet that level gaze as calmly as possible, but it was an ordeal.

And then: "Why do you avoid me so assiduously, Miss Norton?" he asked abruptly.

Taken entirely off her guard, Clemency stared back at him in consternation.

"But—Colonel Amberley, I don't."

"But you do. And as an instructor of youth I hope that you realize truthfulness is a most important virtue." There was a note of amusement in his voice, but he was quite determined not to let her off. "You run away from me as if I had the plague. Has someone told you that I devour young women?"

"No." Forced to her natural truthfulness, she collected her courage.

"I—understood that you didn't like people around."

He frowned. "Who told you that? Was it Syrie?"

Her look of dismay answered him. "O.K. I just wondered. But like many of my sister-in-law's statements, that is a half truth. I assure you that there are some people whom I would—and do shun like the very devil, but I am not a misanthrope. Honestly, I am quite harmless—I won't eat you."

This time they laughed together, and barrier seemed to have been removed.

"Have a cigaret," Piers said, and he pulled out his case.

SHE took a cigaret, and as she bent to the flame of his lighter, he noticed—not for the first time but with a clearer consciousness—how beautifully molded her jaw-line was, curving into the lovely firm column of her throat. But as she straightened and glanced at him with a murmur, "Thank you," he was staring across the starlit courtyard.

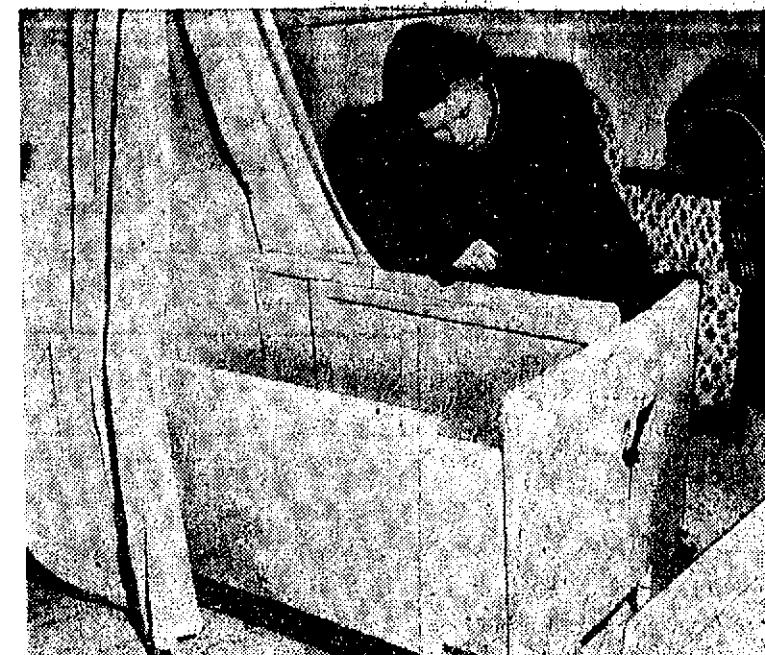

"Baba was thrilled with her ride," she said. "I hope she really behaved?"

"Excellently. Children usually do if you treat them like human beings—instead of a mixture of lap-dog, angel and toy."

"She's really a good little thing, bless her." She broke off. She had been going to add that she thought she ought to go back to her charge, but he had accused her of avoiding him.

Be honest! she told herself. You know you don't want to go. You know just sit here like this for hours.

Illinois Governor Would Continue Rent Control

Washington, April 22.—(UPI)—Gov. Adlai E. Stevenson of Illinois told senators today a sudden end of federal rent controls on June 3 would result in disorder, confusion and "perhaps some violence."

Stevenson said that unless Congress extends the federal controls he would be forced to call the Illinois legislature into special session to pass a state control law.

But under questions of Chairman Maybank (D-SC) of the senate banking committee, Stevenson said he could go along with a reported compromise.

This would retain existing controls until the end of this year with a provision for an additional six month extension if states or cities request it.

think Herman Maxwell has been mistreated. They are not in the business to find out the fair, kind and decent treatment he has received at the hands of the officers of this court.

They will talk about, they will market to the world a condition which the Christian, law abiding citizens of both whites and blacks today in the South working together, can and will remedy. They stand ready to begin, and are willing for a price to exploit all of us here in the South.

There is in this world a force ready to pick up the cry and carry it to all the civilized world. The Russian world is now waiting for a message that they can use to poison the minds of the world against us. I am asking you as a southerner, as a man who loves the South, to demonstrate here today what God can do in Hempstead county, Arkansas: not to set this boy free, but not take his life, and thereby put the blood of this boy upon us at this time. I think that verdict from you would be most meaningful. I think that you would send from Hope the greatest story which has ever been told—a story of mercy.

I must close now, Herman Maxwell, well, we have done with the assistance of my God, all that I thought wise and in my judgment best to do in your defense. I may never have a chance to see you again, and I want to say to you now that whatever happens here today, you have become meaningful in this community.

Whether it exacts your life depends upon twelve men who sit in this jury box. It is their decision, and my work is finished.

Gentlemen of the jury: I submit to you that because of tolerance, that because of the fine way we have gotten along in this trial and because of the great experience we have had, we have shown to the world that we believe in the principles of justice in our land. I ask you to remember the admonition of the vagabond from Galilee when he told them that he was the neighbor who was hated and despised taught us the greatest lesson ever told. I ask you to be prayerful at this hour.

Moscow Speeds Up War of Nerves—Part of Well Laid Plan to Spread Communism

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
AP Foreign Affairs Analyst

Moscow's war of nerves against the Western world is being speeded up as part of a fresh phase of the Red revolution for the spread of communism.

This is in considerable degree a psychological assault which is coming from numerous directions to make it confusing. It is aimed not only at the governments but at the general publics of the democracies.

The purpose is to create nervousness, weariness and anxiety among the various populations. The constant hammering with incidents and belligerent statements, which savor of war, is calculated to break down morale.

This war of nerves isn't just a flash in the pan. It is a studied part of Moscow's strategy, and it accounts for many of the otherwise inexplicable actions of the Soviet, such as the perpetual disruption of United Nations activities by the use of the everlasting "nyet" (no).

Among the latest developments in this Red onslaught was the shooting down of the American plane by a Soviet warplane over the Baltic with the loss of ten U. S. airmen. As was expected, Moscow has flatly and brusquely rejected Washington's protest that the American plane was unarmed, and has refused to pay compensation for the loss of life—an attitude which has angered members of the U. S. congress.

Hot on the heels of this dangerous incident Moscow has charged the United States, Britain and France with "grossly violating" the provisions of the Italian peace treaty which provided that Trieste and surrounding area made a free territory. The Soviet allegation is that Britain and America are maintaining a naval base in the port of Trieste—a charge which is denied. The United States and Britain claim they are without their rights in keeping troops in Trieste until the free territory is established.

These Soviet demands are being backed by Italian Communists, who want to prevent any agreement between Italy and Yugoslavia over the Trieste territory in which both are so vitally interested.

As though these moves by Moscow weren't enough, the satellites are dutifully playing their part in the war of nerves against the West. The latest development is in Czechoslovakia, once the staunch friend of America who played such a great part in the creation of the republic at the end of World War I.

The Moscow controlled Red government in Prague has ordered the closing of the libraries of the U. S. Information Service in Czechoslovakia, and the shutting of the American consulate in the city of Bratislava. Of course such an insult can't be passed unanswered, and Washington has ordered Czechoslovakia to close its consulate in Chicago by May 1.

So runs the story of many incidents, all of which are calculated to worry the Western nations and their publics. And of course while Moscow is thus harassing the democracies, it is also impressing on its satellites the might and daring of Russia.

This war of nerves may or may not be depressing to a lot of folk.

this disputatious man — this smart lawyer who knew all about the meaning of the letters and the history of man in that time and during that time replied, yes, we know the law — we know that the first law is: "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy strength, and with all thy mind; and thy neighbor as thyself" Jesus told him that he had answered right; "this do, and thou shalt live!"

And then the smart lawyer was befuddled, and he asked again, will you tell me who is my neighbor? And as a definition of that question, Jesus gave him an illustration. It was told about a certain man on the road to Jericho who fell among robbers, and in his plan when he caused a man like Herman Maxwell to change his mind on that fatal morning of July 20, 1949, and take Highway 20. I don't know what came over Herman Maxwell that morning. We do know there was something because the proof shows that he said to the officers: "I don't know why I did it."

But, we do know that the facts and the happenings following that fatal decision are significant and meaningful in this community because here we are working together as whites and blacks in this community in behalf of this poor defendant negro. Gentlemen there was another road in history, called the Jericho road. These roads might be analogous. They must end ultimately. Are they without significance? No, these roads have played a very important part in bringing about changes in the thinking of men. There was the Jericho road. There was a road that is known from immemorial, and we have a man named Jesus, the vagabond carpenter, who was traveling in Judea with John, Martha, and Mary, and her brother, Lazarus.

By the Road to Jericho, this man Jesus, the vagabond carpenter, revolutionized the thinking of the whole world. All these roads let us see if we can devise from the meaning of history, a condition that will reconcile the acts so that they will come within compliance with the teachings of Jesus. When Jesus was on earth, we are told that they said of him that he was stirring up too much trouble and that they would have to do something with him.

We are told that when he was in Judea one day, they had a certain smart lawyer to ask him a few questions to see whether or not Jesus himself was violating the law, and get something on him, and this smart lawyer asked Jesus, "What shall I do to inherit eternal life?"

And Jesus, knowing the purpose for which the question was asked replied: What is written in the law on the matter? What does the law say? You know all about the law, what does it say? And

He doesn't know now why he did it. I don't know why he did it, but I know. I believe and I hope, that he may be an instrument from the city of Hope in driving you and toward greater plans and heights as drawn from the lesson of the Road to Jericho.

DICK POWELL—JUNE ALLYSON IN LITTLE ROCK MAY 5-6

Dick Powell, Little Rock's and Arkansas' most famous motion picture star (upper right), and his lovely and popular wife, June Allyson (upper left), will be in Little Rock for the second annual "ROSE FESTIVAL" on May 5th and 6th. On the night of May 5th an all-southern premiere of "The Reformer And The Redhead," will be shown at The Arkansas Theater. The center picture is from a scene in this humorous picture with a political background. Through the generous cooperation of the stars, who will attend the premiere in person, the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Studios and The Robb-Rowley Theaters, money derived from the performance will be given to The Little Rock Boys Club. Dick was one of the first members of the club and a life-long supporter. Advance ticket sales for the premiere will be handled by the Women's Auxiliary of The Little Rock Boys Club. June Allyson Powell will act as Parade Marshal during the Saturday, May 6th, Rose Festival Parade in downtown Little Rock. The Rose Festival this year promises to be one of Arkansas' greatest spectacles and a record crowd is expected for the three day event. The Powell's have been invited by Governor McMath to be his guests in Arkansas' new executive mansion. It will be Mrs. Powell's first trip to Arkansas.

DOROTHY DIX

Jealous Wives

Dear Miss Dix: I notice in your column an ex-business-woman says that her experience in an office had made her distrustful of men and therefore jealous of her husband. I am an ex-business woman also, but my experience impressed upon me that where there is one frisky boss there are ten bosses who employ women for their efficiency alone. That where there is one girl making eyes at her employer there are dozens to whom the boss is tolerated merely because he represents the weekly pay check. Twice I was the victim of wives' suspicion and in both cases I was merely trying to help the men to make more money for their wives. If there is one thing that I learned while working it is not to beware of men, but to beware of their wives.

MRS. J. O. E. ANSWER: This fine and wise letter reaches to the very heart of one of the greatest problems in modern married life. For the great majority of business men are compelled to employ attractive women in their offices, and the great majority of wives are eaten up with jealousy.

Have False Picture
Why women are so much more jealous of their husbands' feminine employees than they are of any other women, nobody knows, but they are. They seem to feel that a business office offers a seductive environment that leads even the most prosaic and devoted middle-aged husband into philandering. This is, of course, far enough from the truth. The business office is a workshop and a man's thoughts during business hours are not of romance, but of finance.

The average boss loops upon the women in his office as just so many cogs in the wheels of the business. He isn't interested in them personally, but only in their efficiency. And the average girl employee in his soul thinks God she is not her boss' wife and that she doesn't have to stand his whims and his crochets except during business hours.

So the jealous wife had as well wipe her tears away and look at the matter rationally. The world is full of women, and if a man is a wanderer by nature he will always find some one to philander with. And a husband who has to be watched isn't worth the trouble.

Most divorces are the result of husbands and wives seeking abroad the affection they were denied at home.

Dear Dorothy Dix: I am a happy married woman with two lovely babies, a wonderful husband and a nice home. My husband is of a very affectionate nature and very demonstrative and thinks I don't care for him because I cannot show my love for him. Do you think if I refused to let him kiss me and pet me that he will find somebody who will?

ANNIE ANSWER: Absolutely. It is a pity when men and women of different temperaments marry, because it brings happiness to neither.

Most divorces are the result of husbands and wives seeking abroad the affection they were denied at home.

'Maybe Today Will Be Better'
Is the Hope of the Little Man in Life's Struggle

BY JAMES MARLOW

Washington, April 25—(P)—The little man is no spring chicken any more. He's lived a good while. He's seen a lot of things, so one good, many bad.

In his lifetime he has seen a baby born, an old man die. And he has never stopped wondering at man's ability to be many things: A hero, a coward, a martyr, a betrayer, a thief, a benefactor, a liar, a scoundrel, selfish, selfless, a wrecker, a builder, a dreamer, a realist, a saint and a sinner.

He has seen people garbed in a natural nobility, warm and kind. And he has seen others moved by cunning cruelty.

Sometimes in one lifetime, the little man knows, one man can be many of those things or just one of them alone.

The little man has no illusions. From what he has seen, he knows, he would not want to be there if a loaf of bread suddenly were thrown into a roomful of long-starved men.

Not because of what might happen to him but because of what the sight of the bread might do to some of the men, but not all.

From what he has seen of man-kind — the many evidences of man's goodness — he knows man's capacity for goodness is very great.

Why then, he asks himself, are not all men good and kind and forthright? Why all the hate, suspicion, greed? Why do men hurt each other?

Because one lifetime is short. The little man has known only a few people well. So what he has learned isn't much.

Still, he knows, the struggle for security — some call it survival — can twist a man's mind and fork his tongue.

The man knows, can take many shapes: money, prestige, power, glory, or only a daily job.

It may be a consuming sense of fear, rooted in his childhood, which makes a man hostile to all mankind, suspecting everyone.

Or, it may be the little man called ego — the "I am" in all of us — which craves nourishment at any desperate price.

A scholar may find his security, calm his fears and sooth his ego by working for a small salary in a library.

Another man may have to feed his ego by inflicting pain so that, standing astride the lives he's ruined, he can tell himself:

"I outsmarted the 'em' or 'I changed history' or 'they'll never forget me.'

And sometimes whole groups of people and even nations are swept up in these things, the little man tells himself, and when they are they can kill and ruin and be

Compromise on Gambling Bill
Being Drafted

Washington, April 25—(P)—Senator McFarland (D-Ariz.) said today a compromise anti-gambling bill probably will be drafted because of a disagreement between the justice department and the federal communications commission.

The two government agencies are at odds over the kind of legislation congress should pass to control big-time gambling syndicates and bookmaking operations.
